

GEO. J. KELLER

The entomological fraternity has lost in the death of Geo. J. Keller one of its most enthusiastic collectors of Lepidoptera.

He was born Dec. 24, 1873, in Darmstadt, Germany, where he studied pharmacy and served his apprenticeship in his father's apothecary. He came to this country in 1892 and owned and operated in succession and simultaneously a number of drug stores and the one he left at the time of his death is by far the finest in Newark, N. J.

Being a lepidopterist all his life he devoted his efforts the last fifteen years to the genus Catocala, of which he accumulated by successful breeding and purchase one of the most complete and largest collections in the country.

Always of a social and agreeable disposition, his death will be keenly felt by all who were fortunate enough to enjoy his acquaintance.—OTTO BUCHHOLZ.
